Larco Announces New USB Kiosk Mat for Kiosk Security

New mat connects to computers easily with USB connection

Brainerd, MN – March 7th, 2008 – Larco Manufacturing, the leading U.S. supplier of Automatic Door Mats, Handicap Wall Switches, and Industrial Safety Mats today announced that it has released a new USB Kiosk Security Mat product.

Larco's USB Kiosk Security Mat eliminates unattended unauthorized access to a kiosk using a pressure sensitive Mat, which is connected to a computer using a standard USB cable. Located on the floor in front of a kiosk, users must step on the mat to activate the system before log on is possible. Once a user steps off, Larco's USB Kiosk mat automatically logs the user off and requires the proper credentials to log back into the system. This unique system prevents sensitive information from remaining on a computer screen for others to view. Kiosks utilizing Larco's new product are commonly used in places such as banks, hospitals, hotels, human resource stations, or anywhere kiosk information security is a concern.

The introduction of the Larco USB Kiosk Mat simplifies the computer link by utilizing the common Plug and Play USB connection. It can also work with existing security, and has an energy saving feature. The mat is waterproof, and is offered in four standard sizes as well as four different finishes. The product is also available in custom colors and sizes.

"We are excited to offer a great new product that helps keep valuable and private information secure. The USB Kiosk Mat is another example of Larco's dedication to the safety and security markets, and to provide customers with a useful solution to security access control," said Varuni Novick, Larco's president.

"Through the use of Larco's product engineering team, customers benefit from our responsive culture. If a customer needs functionality added to our product line, then we will prioritize the resources to help meet the customer's needs."
